

Communication.commercial

Divide the group into teams of four to six. Give them a little-known product, or at least one they may not be familiar with.

Some examples could be a Brillo pad, a copy of popular Mechanics, a tea strainer, or a shoe horn.

The contest is to see which team can put on the best commercial and be most persuasive in their delivery. The "commercials" should be no longer than 90 seconds in length but should use all the teens, even if some of them are background characters.

Give each team about five minutes preparation time.

(For added fun, have the real prices and uses of the items on a page and read it after the commercial)

<http://bradzockoll.tripod.com/youthworker/id3.html>